Course Description and Overview

The course consists of a study of the methods of elementary probability and statistics. Some time is devoted to finding probabilities for both discrete and continuous probability functions, and discussing the role probability plays in estimation and decision making. The main emphasis of the course, however, is on methods of describing data, finding sampling estimates and testing hypotheses. Throughout the course, applications are stressed as is the interpretation and understanding of the statistics and methods used.

The student will:

- become familiar with basic probability and statistical methodology and terminology
- learn how to present data graphically and be able to read and interpret such presentations
- learn how to calculate estimates and other statistics, and interpret and compare statistics
- find probabilities and understand the role of probability in statistical decision making
- learn how to test a hypothesis and use statistical procedures to help make decisions
- be able to identify an appropriate statistical procedure to use in a given situation and identify when a procedure is improperly used

In addition to lecturing, the following tools will be utilized in this course to enhance the student's learning process:

- statistics software
  - graphing calculators
  - use of the Internet
