This class covers how to design a web page from scratch. (We will not be using FrontPage or anything like that.)

Text: No Required Textbook. A good (and cheap) reference book is HTML for the World Wide Web with XHTML and CSS: Visual QuickStart Guide, Fifth Edition, Elizabeth Castro, ISBN 0321130073. However, this book is not required. If you think you might be interested, check bookpool.com and amazon.com to see if you can get a decent price.

Courseload: There will be weekly quizzes and frequent programming assignments. These will comprise 60% of your final grade. There will be two in-class exams each comprising 10%, and a final exam comprising 20%.

Office Hours: Monday Wednesday Thursday Friday 12:00 — 3:00 P.M., or by appointment.

This course satisfies the Formal Communication Studies requirement.

These courses are designed to introduce students to the ways in which information and ideas are expressed using a communication system other than English. Such courses should foster the student's ability to conceptualize and communicate in an orderly, rational manner.

Characteristics of a communication system include: 1) possession of a grammar; 2) operation from an established set of rules; 3) reasoning properties such as deduction, inference drawing and problem solving. This includes courses in languages and those in which the central focus of the course is on statistics, computers or formal logic.

Disability: If you have a need for disability-related accommodations or services, please inform the Coordinator of Disability Services in the Disability Services Office at 1104 University Center (227-1737). Reasonable and effective accommodations and services will be provided to students if requests are made in a timely manner, with appropriate documentation, in accordance with federal, state, and University guidelines.
